Observer wants membership

MICHAEL BURNS
Editor in Chief

The Tiger Town Observer, formerly the Clemson Spectator, was denied voting or funding privileges but granted Media Advisory Board membership at a meeting of the University's Media Advisory Board Friday, pending an internal review of the board's responsibilities.

The conservative newspaper said it was not in search of funds, but it petitioned nonetheless for recognition and membership to the board, which is comprised of student media members, the joint media advisor and other faculty and student appointees.

The board's most significant responsibility is the allocation of media funds. Members vote to pass each media organization's budget, and in doing so the media allocation is divided in what members call a clawing-and-scratching affair. As a non-funded and non-voting member, The Tiger Town Observer joins The Tiger as the board's only media members not accepting funds from the University's media allocation.

The Tiger Town Observer's membership pending the internal review of the board's purpose was passed in a motion made by Jack McKenzie, public information director, board member and a member of the committee who recommended the creation of the Media Advisory Board over 20 years ago.

"It's time to reevaluate the system and structure and see how [the members] want to go from here," McKenzie said. "Given the changes that have happened in the last few years and the likelihood of getting more requests for recognition, I think it would make sense to step back, look at what we have and what we want."

Despite the existing board's shortcomings, Greg Kresden, editor of The Tiger Town Observer, is happy with the outcome of Friday's meeting.

Excellency in teaching Award given to top three professors

TODD WHISENHUNT
staff writer

For the past two years, Student Government has honored professors who have shown exemplary performance in and out of the classroom.

The Excellency in Teaching Award with an all-expense-paid trip to Europe is funded by several area companies.

This year, three Excellency in Teaching Awards were given. The recipients are Jeff Appling, Frank Day and Bill Surver. The

Frank Day

Bill Surver

Jeff Appling

Michelin Tire Company, Greenville Hospital System and Flour Daniel Engineering were this year's sponsors.

"These awards are a part of our continuing efforts to recognize and reward top-quality teaching," said Reid Rucker, student body president. "We care about good teaching and want to show the student's perspective on how important good teaching is to the educational experience."

Jeff Appling is a professor of chemistry. He has been working on the development of a CD-

ROM program for students in general chemistry.

Frank Day is an English professor and an editor for a series of books called Simon Twayne's United States Author's Series. He also has published several books.

Bill Surver is a professor in Biology. He is the chairman of the biology program that is in charge of teaching freshman biology students. He is also currently developing new teaching methods in multimedia.

"One thing you can tell is that when you walk into a classroom to announce the award to the professor and they realize it is student-nominated, student-selected, professors find the award very rewarding," said Rucker.

While students nominate the professors, Student Government researches the professors by attending their classes and talking to former and current students. Last years recipients were Charles Dunn, Doris Helms and Jane Hurt.

CAT set for start

staff writer

The first transit system to be installed in 10 years within South Carolina will begin to serve the City of Clemson and the University, Jan. 8.

The Clemson Area Transit (CAT) system will provide free public transportation to residents while creating employment opportunities. It is funded through a federal grant, the city and the University. This system will eliminate the need for the current campus shuttle system.

"The CAT is a partial solution to traffic congestion," said Al Babinicz, transit administrator, "while also reducing the need for additional parking."

CAT will provide 25 full-and part-time job opportunities in this area. Having safety as one of its top priorities, CAT will help its employees receive and subsidize the cost of getting the required certifications. Each driver will be required to have a commercial drivers license, defensive drivers certificate, and CPR and First Aid certification.

The buses will be illuminated and equipped with two-way radios to provide assistance for anyone. The bus stops will be located in well-lighted, public areas for further protection. CAT will be constructing a total of 11 new bus shelters and 20 reflective signs.

Anonymous donation

staff writer

An anonymous donor has willed the University over $4 million with no restrictions on how the money is to be used.

According to Deborah Dubose, chief alumni and development officer, the contribution is a bequest valued at somewhere between $4 and $5 million. The University officially learned of the bequest two weeks ago, after the donor, who had been working with an unnamed development officer, named the University in a will.

The identity of the donor is a complete mystery. Dubose has no comment on why the donor wants to remain anonymous.

She also refused to provide any information about the mysterious donor, declining to comment on whether he or she is a Clemson alumni. The only comment Dubose had was to say that the donor is "obviously someone who is very fond of Clemson and someone who is very wealthy."

When asked if the donor would ever be revealed, Dubose said that the donor could choose to reveal themselves one day but did not speculate as to the possibility of that occurring.

The donor put no restrictions on how the money is to be used, although it is a possibility that he or she may do so in the future.

Dubose stated that the money will be used for whatever is deemed the highest priority at the time the donor dies and the will is activated.

The money has not yet been counted on the University's deferred gift inventory and will not be until the will is activated and the money becomes available.

The deferred gift inventory, which takes into account all available contributions to the University, currently stands at $47 million.

Resales low at bookstore

MATRISSA IRBY AND REBECCA WALKER
staff writers

With the end of the semester approaching, many students are looking forward to getting some extra money from reselling of their books to the bookstores. What many students do not realize is that the amount of money they spent on the book when they first bought it is not going to match the reselling price.

The Clemson University Bookstore, the Student Book Store and Supply Center, and the Student Off Campus Book Store, Inc., decide how much money they will pay back to students for their books.

The resell price depends on how much the book is in demand by the professors and on the purchase price of the bookstore from the company.

"If a book is chosen by the professor and we need the book, most bookstores will pay 50 percent of the price of the book new, whether it was bought new or used," said Susan Garner, manager of the Student Bookstore and Supply Center downtown. "If the book is not chosen to be used by the professor, we buy it at the wholesale price, which is chosen by the company."

There is no guarantee that the wholesale price on a book is close to what the students paid for it when it was first bought. Many students are unsatisfied with the amount of money they receive when they sell back their books.

"I don't think it's fair when we only get one-third of the money back that we spend on books, and the bookstore turns around and sells them for much more than we got back for them," said Nikki Hughes, a sophomore biological science major.

"I'd just as well sell my books to freshmen," said Demetria Gordon, another sophomore biological science major. "I'd get more money for them."

The bookstores, which all follow the same general rules for buying back books, understand how the students feel about the money they lose in reselling their books.

The bookstores are trying to provide students with incentives to sell their used textbooks back to a particular store. For every $10 worth of books sold to the Student Bookstore and Supply Center, a one dollar coupon is given to the student to be used on any item in the store.

Last Friday, the world celebrated World AIDS Day. Red ribbons were handed out around campus honoring those who have died of AIDS.

Dining with attitudes

staff writer

Have you ever been in the Canteen or one of the other dining facilities and wondered if the servers had it out for you, or if they were just having a bad day? This is one of the biggest complaints concerning Dining Services.

Student Senate has received numerous complaints about the Dining Services, including the attitudes of the servers.

"In my opinion with dealing with all the complaints from the students, I feel the biggest one is the fact that many of the employees are rude to the students," said Spencer Mazyck, the chair of Business Services.

Dining Services created an employee-of-the-month award. It gives the workers an incentive to interact with the students. The students vote on who they think should receive the award, and the winner gets their picture on the wall. The winner also receives a cash bonus and some other gifts. This process is now in action and there are better relations with workers and students.

Faster service in the Canteen was yet another major problem which Senate had to deal with. The lines in the sandwich lines were moving too slowly.

It was decided by Jeff Hall, Dining Services representative, that another person would be placed to work in the sandwich department. An experienced worker was hired to help run things smoothly. The extra worker has helped with the speed of the line.

The Canteen was also having problems with not having certain ice creams to make milk shakes. Hall decided to store some ice cream in LJ Fields restaurant because they had extra space.

Another complaint arising from the Dining Services was the smell from the Clemson House dumpster.

The smell was making many students nauseous as they walked to class. An inspector was called out to look at the seals and fix them if that was necessary to get rid of the smell.

The inspector was able to locate the source of the smell, and the dumpsters have been sealed to halt the possibility of another problem arising.

"Relations between the Dining Services and Student Government are very good," said Mazyck. "They are very cooperative, and they try to get everything done for the students."

Important Internships

HEATHER McDONALD
staff writer

The importance of completing an internship has increased drastically in order to succeed in the job market today. Many students with career-related experience find their job search easier than students without this experience.

Many majors now require an internship for academic credit before graduation. Summer internships are the most common, even though spring and fall interning is becoming more popular.

Students can apply for internships either through their advisors or through the Career Center. The Career Center placed approximately 150 students in internships last summer.

The Center's goal is to gather as much information regarding a student and enter that into a computer database to expose and market the student to a wide variety of companies. This helps students get their foot in the door to getting a company's attention and setting up interviews.

Senior Donald Floyd, a mechanical engineer major,

"There is a lot of information here, but the student has to be willing to do a little research."

• Flora Riley
Career Center Coordinator

took this approach. He completed an internship for Cryovac this past summer. "It was a good working experience," said Floyd. "It gave me an idea of what I do and don't, want to do."

Weekly meetings are held every Wednesday and Thursday at 2 p.m. and Fridays at 2:30 p.m. on the eighth floor of the Union to help guide students through the intern selection process.

"There is a lot of information here," said Flora Riley, coordinator of the Career Center, "but the student has to be willing to do a little research."

Riley also emphasize that students should start looking for an internship as early as their freshman year.

The Student Information System on mainframe has a program which contains job openings and company names that are looking for potential interns. The Career Center also has workshops for interview preparation and resume writing.

Interning is not out of the question for undeclared majors or students who are not sure of what it is they want to do.

An Intern Fair is coming to Clemson on Jan. 31 in the Palmetto Ballroom from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. There students can devote their time to different industries to get a better understanding of the various careers and job duties.

Tiger Stripe vending

staff writer

With the convince of using Tiger Stripe being used at the Canteen and other eating places, the demand of readers on vending machines will be solved at the beginning of the next semester.

The Clemson Student Senate, in conjunction with Clemson Dining Services, has passed a proposal for more Tiger Stripe reading machines to be installed on vending machines throughout campus.

"In January, [the Dining Service] is taking over the snack machines to help resolve [the Tiger Stripe] problem."

• Jeff Hall
Head of Dining Services

machines.

"In January, [the Dining Service] is taking over the snack machines to help resolve this problem," said Hall.

"As far as I know, there are no Tiger Stripe readers in the proposed buildings," Hall said.

The Business committee has been polling the student body to find the most needed places for the machines. Areas like Brackett Hall, Daniel Hall, Lee Hall, Martin and Sirine are priority assignments. The rest are to be decided on this week.

The slight delay in installation is due to the high price tag on the reading machines. Each unit costs between $250-$500.

Armark has currently been rewarded with the contract, while the University is in court over another contract bid for the same job.

On top of these problems is the fact that due to their high price the readers don't pay for themselves. They are just an added convenience for students. The University is willing to absorb the additional cost.

Tiger Clause gives gifts

STAFF REPORTS

At Clemson, the jolly old man who delivers gifts to all deserving students is not Santa Claus but rather Tiger Claus.

Tiger Claus is an informal program of gift-giving sponsored by various faculty and staff. This program, which was started in 1984, provides a monetary gift of $100 to Clemson students who have had special problems or needs during the semester.

The money is comprised of donations from students, alumni, faculty and staff. There is no minimum amount to donate.

The students who receive the gift, as well as the donors, remain anonymous. Due to this anonymity, public acknowledgement of the people behind the Tiger Claus program is not possible.

According to Joy Smith, dean of student life, the only thing Tiger Claus asks is that the students who receive the gifts eventually return the kindness to others.

Street life endurable

All too often, we hear of the hardheaded teenager who believed home life with the parents was difficult but who discovered cold, callous life on the street was unendurable.

This is the case with The Tiger Town Observer which has suddenly discovered that life without family support is unbearable. At one time The Tiger Town Observer, formerly known as The Spectator, proclaimed that it was too politically incorrect to be affiliated with the University. Now its members are on their knees, begging the University's other media for acceptance.

Since its conception, The Tiger Town Observer has viewed itself as a conservative alternative to what it perceives as the liberal excesses of the University's official student newspaper, The Tiger. In the past, this conservative newsletter has voiced strong opposition to multicultural ideals, claiming that multiculturalism leads to balkanization of people.

Now, the tide has turned and I find it ironic that a conservative publication is begging liberals to legitimize its existence.

Indeed, in arguing that they feel "outside the established media" and, therefore, must be included to gain legitimacy parallels that of multicultural advocates. When I first learned of The Tiger Town Observer's bid to become recognized as an official newspaper of the University, I was opposed.

I felt that their newsletter being recognized as an official newspaper would open the door for a proliferation of official student newspapers.

In essence, I found myself using a conservative argument for denying them an official voice in community discourse. However, I cannot, in principle, oppose The Tiger Town Observer's recognition.

I can only hope that life on street has made The Tiger Town Observer's staff more sensitive to the struggles of other minority groups.

Staff Commentary

The good, the bad, and the ugly

ETHAN H. BELLAMY
editorial editor

The Good...How sweet it is to see the Tigers mop up in Williams-Brice Stadium at the expense of Taneyhill. Here's a guy who came down south from Pennsylvania specifically to remind Carolinians that we don't have a monopoly on rednecks. I couldn't help but utter a sinister and triumphant laugh as the TV camera panned down to show Taneyhill on the bench, towel over head, reeking of defeat and dejection. Good luck as a pine-riding, NFL waterboy, Stevie.

The pinnacle of the game was Carolina's celebration penalty on a touchdown that was called back. How fitting for a team renowned for sportsmanship and class. As far as I'm concerned, the Tigers can lose every other game of the season as long as they beat Carolina.

For the soccer team, the curtain closed in the second round of the NCAA Championship—a good showing by Belfast native and Head Coach Trevor Adair in his first year here. Wolde Harris became Clemson's all-time leading scorer in just three seasons, scoring 75 career goals. Miles Joseph and Imad Baba will most likely be gone this spring as they try to firm up a place in the Olympic squad, if speedy Joseph can just stay healthy. Baba seems to have found his niche at the striker position, but word has it that he might not be around for his senior year—fame and fortune in the MLS is calling. Not to worry, next fall we can all see the Justin Rose air force, Workhorse Danny Care, and the Jordan-Quick-Williams defense.

Rick Barnes—you've got to love this guy. Pacing, grimacing, storming around Littlejohn, Barnes brings vitality and a host of other intangibles to the game. Who said Clemson wasn't a basketball school? Ever since Barnes did to Dean Smith what most of the free world would like to do, Clemson basketball hasn't been the same. There is a new atmosphere, charged with anticipation.

The recruiting has worked out well also; Wideman, Jurkunas, Jamison and McIntyre look like the foundation of a ACC Champion to be. I am the president of the Harold Jamison fan club, and I can't wait to see him beating up on the pansy centers from our ACC rivals.

Even if you hate the College Republicans, you have to give them a hand for getting GOP candidate Phil Gramm to the dirt road capitol of the world. Every so often we need some reassurance that our importance is gauged by what we accomplish, not by the size of our dot on the map.

The Bad...Parking at Clemson is still a nightmare, and it didn't take a student survey to tell us that. Just this Sunday, Death Valley Exxon had a tow-truck field day in the horseshoe. It is now clear to me that towing companies, along with the majority of local landlords, will do their best to prey on the young and gullible student population. Revenue, revenue, revenue, life is but a dream.

According to the Tiger survey in October, student apathy is at an all-time high. Thank heavens for the few, the proud, the student government who corral the lemming-like, unappreciative student body away from the pit of acquiescence, dug deeper daily by budget cuts and administrative skullduggery, e.g. University Housing—an oxymoron if there ever was one.

The only good thing to say about housing is that they are finally getting rid of Johnstone. I mean come on, those buildings were ready to fall when my father was in school here—it's about time.

The Ugly...Take one armada of sloppy, rain-soaked, pomp-covered floats and mix with a costly, unnecessary war memorial to get the new and improved Bowman mud pit—it's loads of four-by-four fun! Who are the devils that conspired to so blight the gem of our otherwise beautiful campus? These perpetrators should be found and thoroughly caned.

Student opinion of Governor Beasley nose-dived this year. Not only did he get caught lying about his sports exploits, but he backstabbed his alma mater by hacking away at funding for higher education. Now, more than ever, South Carolinians can be heard mumbling the age-old educational proverb "Thank God for Mississippi."

In short, Clemson gets a barely passing grade for this semester only because of the small minority of proactive and concerned individuals—Adair, Barnes, Baba, Joseph, Rucker, Largey, DeMarzo, "Traffic Boy" Hendrix—that manage to keep everyone else from drowning in a morass of mediocrity. I don't expect the quaint, foothills utopia that tour guides depict by lying about the teacher-student ratio or the glaring disparity between Vickery and Hardin, just a little progress.

Arrivederla, all. I'll miss Clemson and its sea of troubles dearly this spring. I promise to think of my faithful readers as I stroll leisurely through the streets of Florence, surrounded by food the average Harcombe worker can't describe and thousands of beautiful Italian women, none of whom will have their idyllic nature marred by a Long Island accent.

Board's role evaluated

"I wish it were final, but I think it's a step in the right direction," Kresden said. "For reasons really unknown to me, we've been a separate, outside organization since we were started. I think it's time we became a permanent member of the campus community."

Others aren't as satisfied.

"Being on the Media Advisory Board doesn't make members legitimate, and it's not what makes media organizations a part of the University," Greg Schmidt, managing editor of The Tiger, said. "I just don't understand how the board could consider accepting another member at this point in time. Funds and resources are pushed to the limit. If [The Tiger Town Observer] becomes a voting member, it will be a mistake."

"I think the whole situation is ironic to the point of humor," Schmidt continued. "The very right-wingers they support are the reason the media funds, as well as public education funding, have dwindled steadily and considerably. Now, as it turns out, the politicians they support and are supported by have caused the board to think long and hard before it takes on another member. They have no one to blame [for The Tiger Town Observer's non-voting, non-funded status] except the people they have been pushing to get elected."

Board members now turn their attention to the committee charged with determining what role the board should assume. Julie Walters-Steele, joint media advisor and chairperson of the board, expects the committee to present its recommendations to the board before the end of the spring semester.

"I think the way the board went on Friday is good, because we're going to look and see what this board needs to be doing," she said. "If the board is going to set policies ... [The Tiger Town Observer] needs to be a member ... [We need to decide] if the Media Advisory Board is to handle more than funding."

Near death in Death Valley

ASSOCIATED PRESS

On his next journey to Death Valley, Frank Allen said he would be inclined to rub Howard's Rock for a touch of mystic power and a little bit of luck.

That's probably not a bad idea for a man who has nearly died twice watching the Tigers play.

"Mine is just an unusual story," the retired state Highway Patrol sergeant said, sitting back on the couch in the living room of his Abbeville home. "I can truthfully say right now, I don't know when I'll go back. I've already had two strikes, and with three strikes you're out."

"And with a name like Death Valley, you've got to believe it means what it says."

Before Allen retired in 1978, the York County native spent his autumn Saturdays directing traffic and working security with other state troopers at Clemson football games.

It was October 1981, shortly after the Tigers defeated the Virginia Cavaliers that Allen had his first brush with death.

"Shortly after the game, in the west end zone parking lot, I joined a group of people from Abbeville in their motor home," he said. "I began feeling bad, sweating and having pain in my chest and arm. I was having typical heart attack symptoms."

Fortunately, his family doctor was among the tailgaters, and he summoned an ambulance.

"As the ambulance was leaving the parking lot, I went into cardiac arrest," Allen said. "They had to fight all that traffic, but we made it to Anderson Medical Center in about 25 minutes. They had to give me the electrical charge, and fortunately, I came back."

But damage had been done.

The massive heart attack that Allen suffered in the shadows of Death Valley severely damaged his heart muscles, something no surgery could correct.

"The doctors told me if I took care of myself, I'd probably die of something other than heart problems," Allen, 65, said. "That was the good news. The doctors said job stress contributed to what happened. I knew that was happening when I left the highway patrol."

Allen joined the highway patrol at 21. He was transferred from Greenwood to Abbeville in 1960, and retired as the county sergeant in 1978. After his heart attack, even his retirement lifestyle had to change.

The adjustments he made to improve his health seemed to work.

Then, this past September, the long-time season ticket holder flirted with death again.

"It was the day of the Florida State game, and I wasn't feeling good even when I went up there," Allen said. "Looking back, I know I had overextended myself that week, working around the house."

Temperatures were climbing well into the 90s as Allen took his seat in the upper deck of the north stands.

"I realized in the first quarter my heart was beating faster than normal, but I'm a little bit hardheaded, and I did want to see that game," he said. Under the upper deck stands, the beat of his heart turned to a quiver, he said.

"What happened has been described to me as sudden death," he said.

And as the Seminoles trounced the Tigers, Allen was underneath the upper deck stands, fighting for his life.

Later, Allen learned he suffers from a heart condition that sometimes causes his heart to quiver rather than maintain a normal beat. A device has now been implanted just below his rib cage that shocks his heart back into a normal rhythm.

New scholarship

staff writer

Many Clemson students need scholarships to help pay their way through the high costs of college so the Panhellenic Council is starting a Panhellenic Scholarship.

The Panhellenic Council started a CD that matured at $10,000, 10 to 15 years ago. The money they raised was from fundraisers, dues and other activities that the Council participated in. The money collected interest and matured at $20,000. The Council took half of the matured funds and went to the Student Government Cabinet with four options of how the money should be spent.

"It is wonderful for the money to be in an endowment because we are giving back to the University," said Leanne Demarzo, Panhellenic representative.

The scholarship is open for anyone who meets the qualifications. It will start next year and will be everlasting.

"The reason that this scholarship is so good is that it will have Panhellenic Council attached to it forever," Demarzosaid.

The University will decide who will receive the scholarship. The money can be used for any type of University scholarship.

PAID ADVERTISEMENT UNIV. BOOKSTORE OFFERS FREE BOOKS TO STUDENTS

By: Steve Muhlfelder

Good grief! It's that time again. Finals loom in the all too immediate future.

Its also the best time to sell textbooks which you no longer need, and we at your Clemson University Bookstore are ready to do the buying at three locations - the Bookstore itself, at the East Campus Store, or on the Calhoun Drive across from Bracket Hall.

Over the years I've discovered that the whole concept of textbook buy back - purpose and procedure - is quite mysterious to many people.

Clearly, the purpose is to reduce your net textbook expense, as well as to do the same for the student, who eventually buys your recycled book.

This works in two ways. Some books are reused here next semester, and we will pay you one half of the price you paid at the beginning of the semester. The books must be in saleable condition, be the most recent edition, and we must have a demand for them. The key to having a demand, and therefore paying higher prices, is that we must have a confirmed request from faculty members to provide the same titles in January.

What about books which aren't needed at Clemson in January? Once again the books must be saleable and current, but we buy them at prevailing national market prices. We resell them to a national wholesaler of used books, who then resells to other bookstores, and ultimately to students on the campuses served by those stores. This is also the method for disposing of Clemson titles once we have satisfied our local demand.

Every semester many books are revised, and new editions published. The old editions then have no value, making them unsalable on the used book market. Therefore: we are unable to buy them back.

Nevertheless, we purchase many thousands of books every semester - each volume putting cash in your pocket while saving money for another student at Clemson or some distant campus.

So come to the Clemson University Bookstore from December 11th through the 15th (exact hours in our ad elsewhere in this edition of "The Tiger"). Sell us your books, and enter a copy of your buy back receipt in our drawings for daily prizes, and for one truly grand prize - ALL OF YOUR SPRING SEMESTER TEXTBOOKS FREE OF CHARGE! Happy Holidays to all!

Al Babinicz, Transit Administrator

Welcome To Clemson Area Transit

These bus schedules and route maps can give you information about which bus to catch and when to catch it. The system map and individual route schedules represent the most up-to-date information on what your bus system can do for you. If you need help in reading the schedules or in planning your trip, give us a call at 654-CATS (654-2287).

General Service Information

Clemson Area Transit bus service is provided Monday through Friday beginning at 7:00am and ending at 1:00am. Service times are extended to 3:00am on Thursday and Friday nights. Bus service on Sunday is provided from 5:00pm until 1:00am. The Gold Route runs all year long; all other routes run only when classes are in session at Clemson University.

There is no service on the following holidays: New Years Day, Memorial Day, Independence Day, Thanksgiving Day, and Christmas Day. Call CAT at 654-CATS (654-2287) or watch your local papers or bus bulletin board for transit service information.

EVERYONE RIDES FREE

Clemson Area Transit is a public service provided fare-free by the City of Clemson. Just board the bus, take a seat, and enjoy the ride. Convenient transfer points have been designed into the CAT bus route system. You may transfer to another CAT bus as often as you wish. Our buses are radio equipped so the driver can call ahead if he or she is running late to hold the bus you need to transfer to. Be sure to tell your driver when you board if you need assistance in making a transfer.

The Schedules

The system map, shown in the center, gives you a general overview of all the routes. Detailed route maps showing every stop and specific departure times are printed page three and four.

FOR YOUR SAFETY

- Children under 10 should be accompanied by a guardian.
- Please allow riders departing from the bus to exit before boarding.
- No smoking or open alcoholic beverages are allowed on any bus.

- Radios may not be played on any bus.
- Unlike school buses, Clemson Area Transit buses do not stop traffic while passengers are disembarking. For your own safety, please do not cross the street in front of the bus.
- Please do not stand in the stairwells or ahead of the white line. If the bus has to stop suddenly and you are standing in front of the white line, you may be thrown into the windshield.
- When no seat is available and you have to stand, always maintain a firm and secure grip on the handrails, as the bus may come to an unexpected or sudden stop.
- Once the bus has pulled away from the stop, the driver may not open the doors again until arriving at the next stop. Do not enter the street in an attempt to catch the bus.

Lost And Found

Anything left on the bus will stay on that particular bus until the end of the day. If you remember the bus number, you can get on that bus and check with the driver. If you cannot remember the bus number, you can call the transit office at 654-CATS (654-2287), describe the article you've lost, which route and the time of day, and we will figure out which bus it is.

Accessible Transportation

Most CAT buses are wheelchair-lift equipped and provisions are made to provide disabled individuals mobility. These services are provided for all certified persons wanting public transportation in Clemson. For further information about this service you may call the transit office at 654-CATS (654-2287) or write to: Clemson Area Transit, 110 Liberty Drive Suite 107, Clemson, SC 29631.

HELP US HELP YOU

Our drivers are thoroughly trained and monitored as closely as possible. We do, however, appreciate your comments, good or bad, about drivers, routes, etc. If you have a comment, complaint, or suggestion, let us hear from you. Call 654-CATS (654-2287).

Inmates lift each other after weights banned

Since Gov. Zell Miller directed that weight-lifting equipment be removed from prisons, inmates who once pumped iron now exercise by hoisting whatever they find at hand—including each other.

In September Miller ordered the weights removed, and directed that television viewing be curtailed and inmates be required to wear uniforms marked "state inmate" in an effort to get tough on inmates.

At Lowndes Correctional Institution in Valdosta, Arthur Dukes often acts as a 235-pound barbell, while fellow inmates James Jenkins and Donnie Fisher serve time as 185-pound hand weights. At 120 pounds, Harry Swint, the lightest in the group, stands in as a barbell.

"We're just trying to do something to keep in shape and keep our minds on other things," Dukes said.

During exercise periods on the prison yard, one inmate will sit on the shoulders of another while he does push-ups or squat lifts to strengthen his legs. Inmates also use buckets of water or sand as weights for biceps curls.

Inmates are now limited in the amount of weight they can lift. Before the weights were removed, some inmates were lifting as much as 500 pounds

"I was pretty excited," Joel said. "I sit behind him and point the gun in the right direction."

The Bernhards used a special license to hunt on Horicon National Wildlife Refuge land this week.

To help thin out a growing deer population, 600 acres of the land were opened to disabled hunters for the past two gun-deer seasons.

Two deer approached but the animals were running. Joel and Mike never had an opportunity to shoot, Mike said. But the hunters got a second chance when just before 7 a.m. two deer wandered about 50 yards away. Mike gave Joel the signal, and his second shot found its mark.

Joel went to hunter safety class three years ago, not because he wanted to hunt, but so he could go on family outings during gun-deer season. Joel is the only blind student to complete the hunter safety course in John Krapfl's 23 years as instructor.

at a time.

"We had one guy who weighed 238," said Futch, who weighs 185 pounds. "I could squat (lift) him six or seven times."

Blind hunter gets his deer

LOMIRA, Wis. (AP) — Blindness didn't stop 17-year-old Joel Bernhard from shooting a doe Thanksgiving morning.

Specially licensed as a disabled hunter, Joel shot the deer with the help of his brother, Mike, 19.

Get The Class You Need When You Need It!

We realize that scheduling all of the classes you need — when you need them — can sometimes be a real challenge. That's why this spring we're offering a wide variety of freshman and sophomore-level courses on the weekends and through College on TV. Our Weekend College and College on TV students find these courses demand a little more self-discipline and commitment than "traditional" classes, but the trade-off in convenience and flexibility is well worth it.

For an information packet on Spring '95 College on TV and Weekend College offerings, call Martha Duncan toll-free at 1-800-922-1183. Summer schedules available soon.

around the University's class changes. All routes will run during regular semesters, with one route remaining active for the entire year.

Since CAT is mostly federally funded, it is able to provide the service at no cost to the customer. Riders will also be able to make an unlimited number of route transfers.

"The transit system is as useful to the college student as it is to a single car family or to the elderly in the area," Babinicz said.

CAT is scheduled to have its entire fleet buses active by May 1996. The buses will have a 23 passenger capacity and will be equipped with wheelchair lifts.

Tigers poach Eagles

JAY MARCOUX
assistant sports editor

Bill Harder scored 24 points and freshman Terrell McIntyre added 14 as the Tigers went on the road and plucked the Winthrop Eagles 79-63 in Rock Hill, S. C. Saturday night.

"I've got a lot of confidence in Bill (Harder)," said Coach Rick Barnes. "I know what he can do, but for the most part I thought that the younger guys on our team responded well."

The Winthrop Eagles proved to be a formidable opponent, hitting over 50 percent of their shots and over 70 percent of their free throws.

"I told our team that for us to get something out of this, we had to play at a much higher level of intensity," said Winthrop head coach Dan Kenney. "Every time that Rick (Barnes) substituted, we had matchup problems."

Winthrop scored the first five points of the contest, but Clemson went on to take the lead for good early in the first half. Harder scored 11 of his points in the first half while Andrius Jurkunas scored all eight of his points in the first half.

"I just thought it was finally time for me to show up for a game," said Harder. "I knew it would come. I wasn't worried about my offensive game. I was just concentrating on my defense."

Point guard Bill Harder scored a career-high 24 points in the Tigers' 79-63 road win over the Winthrop Eagles Saturday. The Tigers are now 3-0.

Harder has been suffering from Achilles tendinitis, which somewhat affected his performance in the first two games this season.

Both teams experienced about the same level of foul trouble, but the Tigers' domination of the post game and an excellent field goal percentage led to a 42-26 halftime score in favor of Clemson.

Winthrop did not lie down in the second half. Eagle freshman Tyson Waterman drained a three and added a bucket to bring the game within 10 points.

A 24-9 Clemson run that started at the 11 minute mark secured the first road victory of the season for the Tigers. Waterman led the Eagles in scoring with 24 points.

"We know we didn't play our best. We missed some shots that we normally make, and we didn't have the kind of performance that we wanted. But, you've got to credit some of that to Winthrop," said Barnes.

Harold Jamison and Tom Wideman split time at center as Jamison went on to score nine points, grab five rebounds, make three blocks and have two steals in just 18 minutes.

"This was by far the most physical game we have played in," said Barnes. "I told our team that Winthrop would play hard. They were ready to play for a full 40 minutes. I think our team needs that right now."

Lady Tigers dump Cougars

The women's basketball team ran their record to 3-0 Saturday night in Littlejohn Coliseum with an impressive 88-53 victory over College of Charleston.

The Lady Tigers took control with a thoroughly dominant first half that saw them head to the locker room leading by 35. Clemson came out shooting well and never looked back.

During this thrashing of their in-state rivals, Clemson had eleven different players score, four of whom hit for double figures. Leading the way for the Lady Tigers was 6'1" junior forward Laura Cottrell, who hit three of four from three-point range on her way to 15 points, to go along with seven rebounds.

In addition to Cottrell, Stephanie Ridgeway had 14, Amy Geren had 13, including two threes, and Jaci Stimson chipped in with 10. Katasa Eason paced the Cougars with 15 points.

Clemson hit 35 of 69 from the field for a .507 percentage while sinking six of 11 from three-point range for a .545 percentage. Coach Jim Davis is 50-2 during his Clemson career when the team shoots over .500. Freshman Nikki Blassingame lead the Lady Tigers in rebounds with eight, while the Clemson team as a whole out-rebounded the Cougars 52-28.

The Lady Tigers' next game will be at Western Carolina Monday at 7 p.m.

Syracuse in Gator Bowl

Tigers to meet
Syracuse Orangemen for the first time.

MIKE MCCOMBS
sports editor

No matter what team you are rooting for in this year's Gator Bowl, there is a pretty good chance that you will be wearing orange. In a Jacksonville news conference Friday, Gator Bowl officials named the Syracuse Orangemen as Clemson's opponent this New Year's Day.

The Orangemen finished the regular season with the same record as the Tigers, 8-3. Syracuse finished third in the Big East behind Virginia Tech and Miami.

The Hokies are going to the bowl coalition while the Hurricanes of Miami are not eligible for a bowl after sanctions handed down Friday by the NCAA.

Clemson head coach Tommy West was happy with the selection.

"I think you've got a very good matchup that makes for a very physical football game," said West.

Syracuse head coach Paul Pasqualoni was equally enthused.

"We're tremendously excited and very, very honored. We are looking forward to coming to Jacksonville and being part of a great tradition," said Pasqualoni.

This is Clemson's seventh Gator Bowl. They have a 4-2 record and have won the last three Gator Bowls they have participated in.

Syracuse has played in one Gator Bowl. They lost to Tennessee, 18-12, in 1966.

This is Syracuse's first bowl appearance in three seasons. They finished 7-4 last season, but they were not selected for a bowl after losing their last four contests.

Between 1988 and 1993, the Orangemen had a 5-0-1 record in bowl games. If not for Miami's probation, Syracuse would have been headed for the CarQuest Bowl.

Both Pasqualoni and West are excited about their first-ever meeting.

"To have a chance to play a team we really have not played and an outstanding team, it is just very, very exciting for us," Pasqualoni said.

Kasay kicks Carolina past Colts

KEVIN BRIDGES AND XAVERIA MCRAE
staff writers

The Carolina Panthers bucked the Indianapolis Colts 13-10 Sunday afternoon on the strength of a smothering defense and a 38-yard John Kasay field goal with only 12 seconds remaining.

"The challenge today was to bounce back," said Panthers head coach Dom Capers. "The worst thing you can do is count us out. Our defense did an outstanding job all day of getting pressure on both Indianapolis quarterbacks."

The Panthers started the game off on a bad note when their first offensive series ended in a punt. Jim Harbaugh connected with Sean Dawkins for a 31-yard touchdown reception 41 seconds later making it 7-0 Colts after the extra point. The Colts added to their lead at the end of their second offensive drive with a 47-yard field goal by Cary Blanchard.

The Colts began the second quarter with the interception of an Eric Guliford pass by Ray Buchanan in the end zone. The resulting offensive series for the Colts ended in a 53-yard punt by former Tiger Chris Gardocki. The Panthers capitalized on their next possession with a two-yard touchdown run by quarterback Kerry Collins.

Indianapolis' next possession ended in an interception by nose tackle Greg Kragen, the first interception ever by a Panther defensive end.

Carolina once again capitalized on a turnover, capping off their final drive of the half with a 34-yard field goal by John Kasay.

The second half was crucial for the Panthers. The Colts received and came out strong. The Panthers would not allow them to score and forced a punt. Carolina received but could not find the endzone and had to punt.

Tyrone Walker/head photographer

Panther defensive lineman Mike Fox (93) had four tackles and two sacks against the Colts. The Carolina defense racked up a total of seven sacks.

This type of back-and-forth play continued throughout the third quarter. The Panthers defense dominated the Colts offense, constantly pressuring Harbaugh. After being sacked six times, Harbaugh left the game battered and bruised. Rookie Paul Justin replaced him.

In the fourth quarter, both teams sputtered, but the Panthers finished strong and pilled it out. After not getting into the endzone, they tried for the field goal. The Colts special teams denied them this opportunity by blocking the field goal. Both teams were steady, once again not allowing any significant play to occur from either side.

The two-minute warning sounded, and things began to heat up. Both the Panthers and Colts smelled victory, but Carolina seized the opportunity. Guliford returned a Colts punt 17 yards to give the Panthers excellent field position. The Panthers traveled 23 yards farther down field and entered field goal range. Kasay finished the game, making the field goal.

"Our guys did what it took to win," said Capers. "We had to come behind from a 10-0 deficit. The guys hung in there, so it was a really fine team win."

Collins played impressively completing 14 of 34, totaling 170 yards. Harbaugh completed seven of 12 for 102 yards. Backup Paul Justin completed seven of 17 for 71 yards.

Running back Derrick Moore played well coming off of a month long lay off with a knee injury. He had 58 yards on the day.

The Panther defense held Colts running back Marshall Faulk to just 53 yards. The Panthers defense also earned seven sacks with Darion Connor recording three during the game.

The Colts fall to 7-6, and Panthers are now 6-7.

Coach Capers was pleased with the fan enthusiasm and support. "We are starting to like playing here at Clemson," said Capers. "It's beginning to feel more like home. The fans got into the game, and they are great. We were happy to give them something to cheer about."

Sunday, the Carolina Panthers will be visited by the San Francisco 49ers in Death Valley.

Winning is just a habit for Crooks

MELANIE K. ALLEROT
staff writer

Tiger wide receiver Kenya Crooks is not only a talented player on the field, but he is also a well-rounded individual off of the field.

His goal in life is not only to be successful, but to be someone his future children could be proud of.

"Anything outside of this [goal] is candy for me," said Crooks.

Crooks' goal is to play professional football. If not afforded that opportunity, Crooks plans on pursuing a career in psychology. He especially hopes to work with children. He sees them as the most important link between our world and the future.

"They are very important for the good of our society," said Crooks.

Crooks is proud of being a player on this season's nationally-ranked Tiger team, especially after last season.

"It's a blessing," said Crooks. "I am appreciative. From the beginning, being nationally ranked was a goal. It's an honor to go to a bowl. Hopefully, we will come out on top."

Although it is his primary goal, Crooks does not feel added pressure to win.

"It should come natural," said Crooks. "Winning and losing are habits, not an added pressure at all."

Crooks enjoys the support of the students, faculty and community. Fans are support rather than a distraction to him. He claims he doesn't hear the crowd until after the play when he draws off of their excitement.

One of his greatest rushes of excitement comes when he stops at the top of The Hill, rubs Howard's Rock and runs down into the stadium full of orange-clad fans.

"...Either you have success or you have failure. I never want to be a failure."

Although he has just eight catches for 89 yards this season, he set the Tiger record for receptions by a first-year freshman with 21 in 1994.

"I can't attribute it to myself," said Crooks. "I had a lot of help from God, the quarterback passing the ball, the offensive line, the tailbacks and the coaches."

Crooks has a high opinion coach Tommy West.

"Tommy West's knowledge of the game is phenomenal," said Crooks. "He is an aggressive teacher because he wants to win."

Crooks has learned a lot this season from West and other members of the athletic department. He knows that the ins and outs of both football and life can make you a better person. He has learned to use what he learns on the field to his advantage.

"Failure pushes and drives me forward," said Crooks.

"It is a pretty clear cut thing. Either you have success or you have failure. I never want to be a failure."

Crooks believes his faith in God has helped him avoid failure.

"I've been through a lot in the last few years," said Crooks. "Faith has pretty much brought me through."

Combine that faith with Crooks' talent and the Tigers should not have any problems at receiver over the next two seasons.

Quarterback is Syracuse key

To win, the Tigers will have to stop Syracuse quarterback Donovan McNabb. He is the Big East Rookie-of-the-Year and First Team All-Big East.

"The key for us will be to control the quarterback," said West. "From everything I've seen, he's a tremendously talented player who can beat you in many ways. He's the one who makes the team go."

The Gator Bowl, renovated for the Jacksonville Jaguars, seats 72,336 and the minimum payoff will be $1.3 million for each team.

Professional quarterbacks are getting paid to get hit

Mike McCombs
sports editor

Can you believe what's happening in the NFL this season? I mean, you turn on the television and you hear about who is suing who and which team is moving where this week.

If that's not enough, after reading the game stories in Monday's paper, you have to read Tuesday's paper to find out who got fined by the league office for doing exactly what they're getting paid to do. It seems like every week there is another defensive player getting fined for hitting the quarterback.

Maybe it's just me, but I'm pretty sure that hitting is an important part of football. Without hitting, what have you got? The NFL would be just an expensive version of ultimate frisbee.

It would be different if these hits were the malicious, years-after-the-pass, crown-of-the-helmet-first, rib-breaking, lip-busting hits. But they are not. Some weren't even penalized on the field.

If the refs on the field did not see fit to throw a flag for a players' actions during the game, then how can some guy in a suit in New York take a hunk of his paycheck for the same thing?

It's just like passing a police officer while doing the speed limit and having some judge show up at your front door three days later to give you a ticket. I bet most people would be extremely receptive to that idea.

The way I see it, quarterbacks should be treated just like any other player. They all put on their jock straps the same way.

When Jim Kelly walks out on the field, he should know what to expect. Football should be no different for him now than in college or in high school (where they throw flags, not fines for penalties), except for the fact that he's getting about $3 million more to do it.

He's getting $3 million not only to throw the football and run an offense, but also to sacrifice his body, if necessary, to do it. And the guys on the other side of the ball are making just as much to keep him from doing it. That's professional football. Let 'em play.
